General Rule: The theme should be the star of your photo. The subject of your image must be the theme itself, not just include it as a minor detail. For instance, a headshot would not be close-up while focusing on just an eye would.

- Close-up/Detail: Close-up photography tightly frames a subject, focusing on details while excluding the broader scene. It is commonly used to capture intricate features or specific details of an object.
- Animal: Animal photography focuses on capturing images of animals, typically in their natural habitats but not limited to.
- Minimalist: a type of image-making that relies on simplistic compositions, heavy use of empty space, and elimination of clutter. Photos generally feature some form of main subject but subject presence is kept to a minimum with the subject surrounded by empty space. Here is an article on it: https://digital-photography-school.com/photographic-minimalism/

Examples:

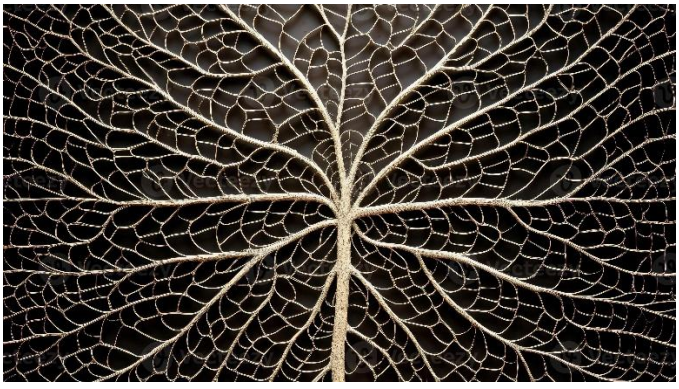

Close-up/Detail

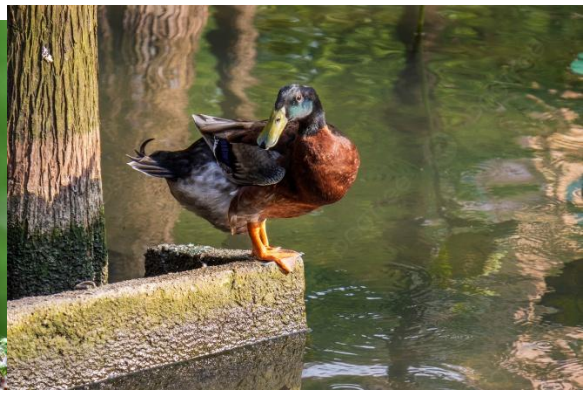

Animal

Minimalist

