

General Rule: The theme should be the star of your photo. The subject of your image must be the theme itself, not just include it as a minor detail. For instance, a beautiful canal scene with a minor reflection in the water is not enough to qualify for the "Reflection" theme. The reflection must be the primary focus of your photograph.

- Abandon or Forgotten: Capture a subject that appears old, worn, or neglected.
- Reflections: Use reflections to create a powerful and visually interesting image.
- Shadows: The shadow must be the central subject of your photograph.

Examples:

Abandon

Reflections

This picture is a beautiful scene and the reflections ADDS to the image but it is not the subject of the picture.
